

First full motion stamp out in The Netherlands

Posted Feb 16th 2006 11:15AM by Thomas Ricker

Filed under: Misc. Gadgets

The exchange rate between the euro and dollar must have jumped significantly since we last crossed The Pond 'cause TPG Post in Holland just issued two regular-costing 39-euro-cent stamps...with moving images. These unique plastic stamps use lenticular technology to lace twelve film stills together to replay the winning Olympic races of two skating legends (in Holland anyway). These stamps are available now from the Dutch post office. No doubt we'll get some wavy flags any day now.

original article: <http://cellphones.engadget.com/2006/02/16/first-full-motion-stamp-out-in-the-netherlands/>